What's the fit? The fit is an aesthetical information indicating the amount of face coverage for a specific size. The frames shown in the image are all the same size but have different fit.

The three possible fittings are:

- Narrow: A small lens front designed to fit those with a slightly narrow head.
- Regular: A large lens front designed to fit those with an average-sized head.
- Wide: A large lens front designed to fit those with a wide head.

FRAME SIZE

What's the frame size? The size of the frame counts as functional information, which is defined by the hinge to hinge distance or else the width of the frame measured from the inside of the eyewear to the center of each hinge.

OTHER MEASUREMENTS If you already have a pair of glasses, check for engraved numbers on the inside of the temple. The first one is the Model code, then the Lens width and Bridge width. There is usually a third number which represents the Temple Length, which is the measurement in millimeters of the 'arms' of the frame. Sometimes there is also a fourth number which is the Lens Height. Each of these numbers is measured in mm. Frames are measured in millimeters. We've included this information for each of our frames to help you estimate how they'll fit your face.
